

Allergens are highlighted in bold in the product information. If you have an allergy to any of these, the product is not suitable for you.

"May contain" refers to allergens that may be present due to the manufacturing process or the supply chain, meaning there is a risk of cross-contamination. For example, if a product "may contain tree nuts," it indicates the presence of allergens such as almonds, brazils, cashews, hazelnuts, macadamias, pecans, pistachios, walnuts, and their derivatives.

The allergen information in the table is based on specifications from the product suppliers. We have taken all reasonable steps to ensure its accuracy, but the Pizza Hut website will be updated if any changes occur.

Please inform Pizza Hut staff of your allergy every time you visit, even if you've eaten the dish before, so that the necessary precautions can be taken to avoid cross-contamination. If a recipe is changed, you should notify staff about your allergy during each visit.

Our BBQ Sauce is suitable for those on a gluten-free diet, containing less than 20 parts per million (ppm) of gluten in the final product.
